

Cultercullen

No sites are allocated for new development.

- There is little development pressure due to the settlement's secluded location and relative distance to major transport routes.
- The community considers that incentives for redevelopment of brownfield and derelict buildings should be promoted, rather than new allocations.

